News in Education

9/9 ACT Test Date Cancelled at In-House Test Centers in Hong Kong

Many students were preparing for the ACT September 9th 2017 Test Date this past week. The ACT contacted test centers that were holding the test in-house, such as at International schools, to cancel the September ACT Test due to parts of the test being leaked. The tests held by the HKEAA proceeded with the test as normal as students received email confirmation that their test center was not cancelled.

The cancellation of the ACT at in-house test centers may cause difficulties for students wishing to apply Early Decision, as the ED deadline is Nov 1 and the next ACT date in Hong Kong isn't until Nov 11. Planning ahead to take the ACT multiple times could help accomodate any unforeseen events.

University of Houston flooded after Hurricane Harvey

The US state of Texas was front and center in the news lately as images of flooding from the heavy rain of Hurricane Harvey were all over news outlets. The University of Houston located in the largest city in Texas, was also affected by the heavy rain and flooding. Students had to evacuate flooded residence halls to other residence halls, and dining halls remained open to cater to the students stranded on campus.
